Our intrepid instructors

Great smiles even from Neil !!

So that's what they were up to ?

Let me check on your complaint Mr. Glass

*Now we must keep this confidential
Herr Doctor*

Discretion is my middle name Mr. Glass, you have nothing to worry about !

Yet another happy camper !

Head gear leaving much to be desired

Head lock leaving little to the imagination !!!

Terry's Travails

Au revoir mon ami – one couloir too many

Sacre Bleu – Lazarus McEvoy

Vivienne : “Let me put your contact details in my phone”

Terry : “You know where you can put them”

Not always on their feet

Eamonn on his knees

Tom at Level 0

A rare sight for John

And no pictures of Brendan at all !!!!

Our Gruppenfuhrer

Never know when you will need his services

What are the Beatty Babes up to ?

So much for ski poles !!

Extra portions for the Gruppenfuhrer

Not cut out to be an instructor

Hotel Le Peupliers

The best dressed for dinner !!

It's a deal - €25 excl. coffee and drinks

The sleepy heads

Vivienne tired of the company !!

As always, nobody was up to the sleepy standard of Herr Doctor !!

Justin about to go to noddy land

Nice pics

Courchevel Couloirs

The Courchevel Couloirs can be seen from almost anywhere in Courchevel. They snake down to the right of the Saulire Télépherique (LUM: Looking Up Mountain), thin ribbons of snow separating the ribs of rock. Before attempting the Couloirs for the first time, ski down Combe de Saulire (red) and traverse left off the piste (LDM: Looking Down Mountain). One passes successively on the left the exit from: Panoramique (between the first two rock outcrops); Sous-pylons (right under the cable car); Emile Allais (the narrowest); Grand Couloir (the widest, and generally considered the easiest); and Couloir Croix des Verdons (the most difficult to access). By traversing high off the piste it is possible to get a feel of the snow conditions and watch two or three groups skiing (or falling) down the couloirs.
